4) The rule noticed above is rather vague. It prohibits a councillor from voting when his conduct is question whether this prohibition applies only this voting so far as voting in respect of his conduct or whether it applies to his voting generally on all questions is not clear. Evidently the rule council intend the former view. Hence to make the rule clearer, the words "on that question" may be added. The rule will then read as follows "If the conduct of a councillor is question, that Councillor shall not vote on that question."
